

Day 2

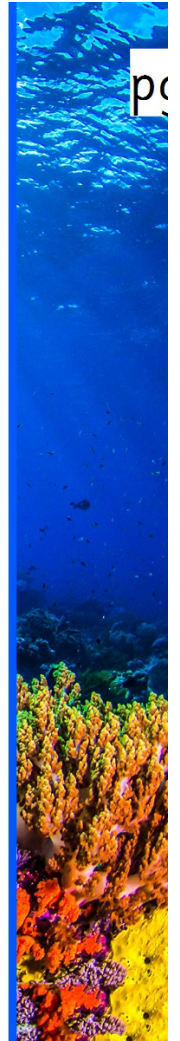

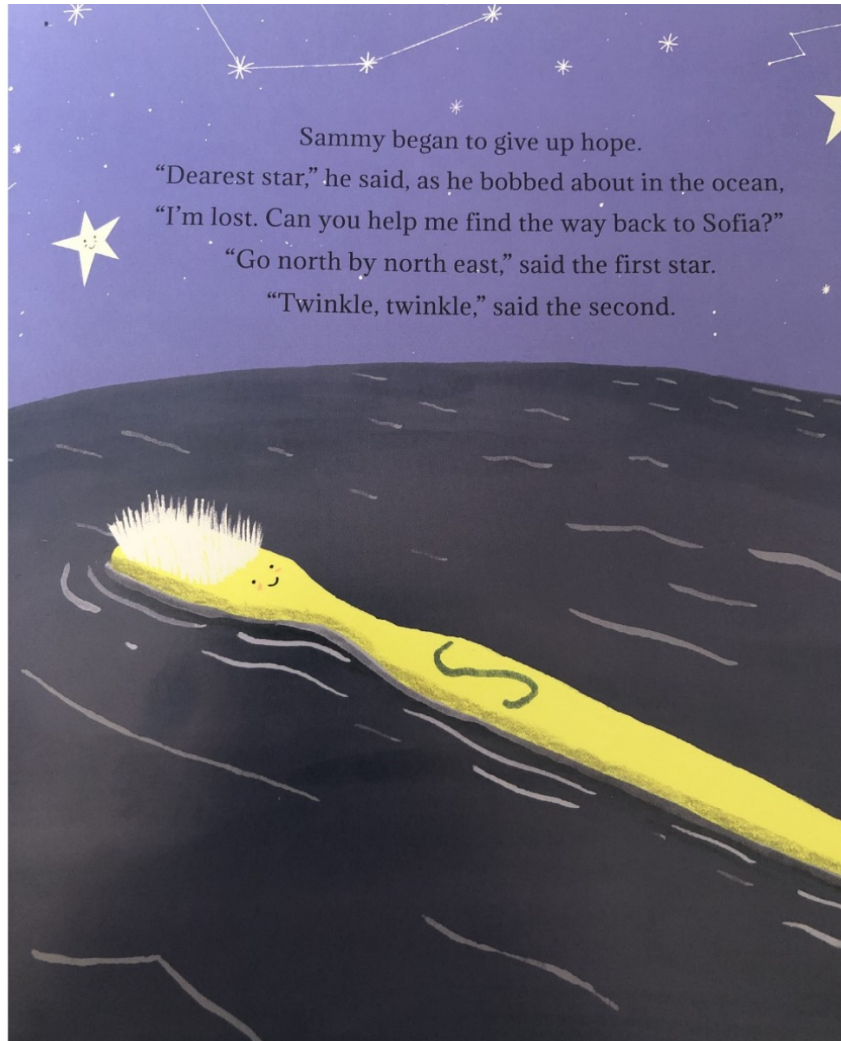

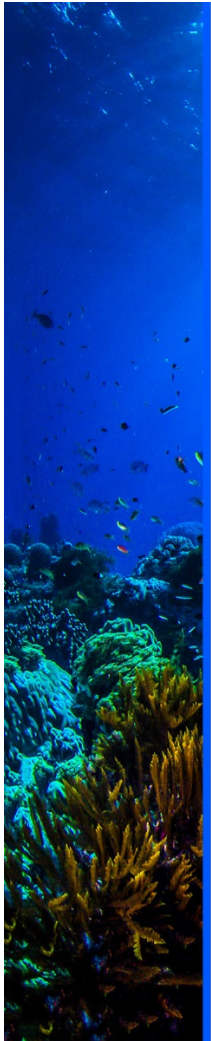

Sammy sailed for days
and weeks and months,
swirling and whirling in
the middle of the ocean.

He met a detergent bottle
who thought it was a pirate ship, tried to talk to a deflated balloon,

and swam up to a raft of plastic straws who had banded together. None of them could help him find his way home.

In the morning an albatross flew down, landing on the water beside Sammy.

"Yum!" The albatross pecked his tummy.

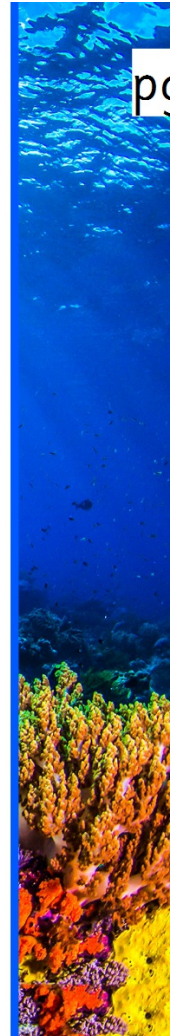

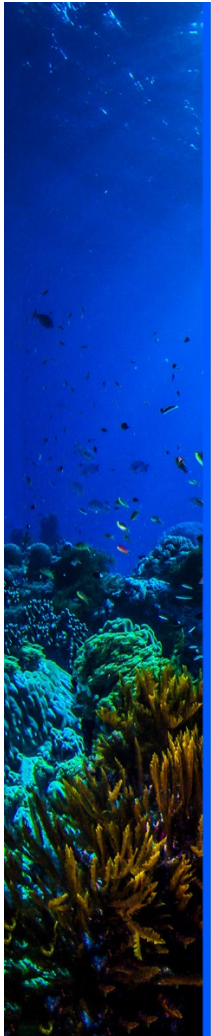

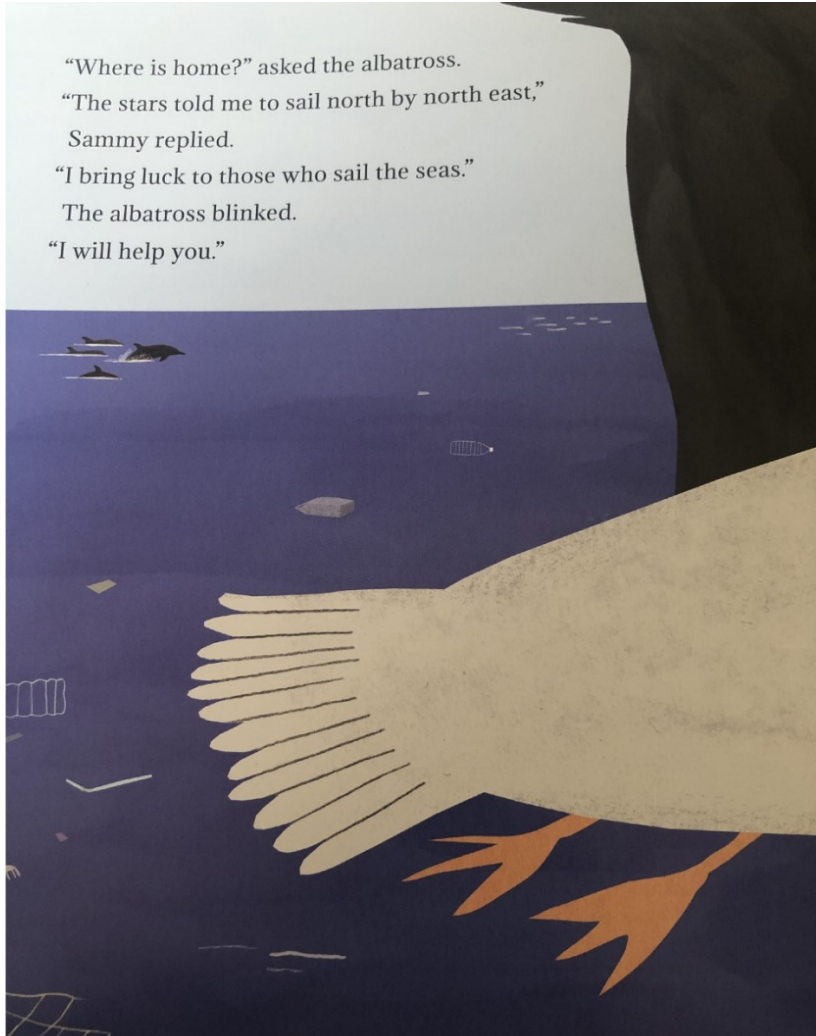

"Ow! Don't eat me," Sammy cried.

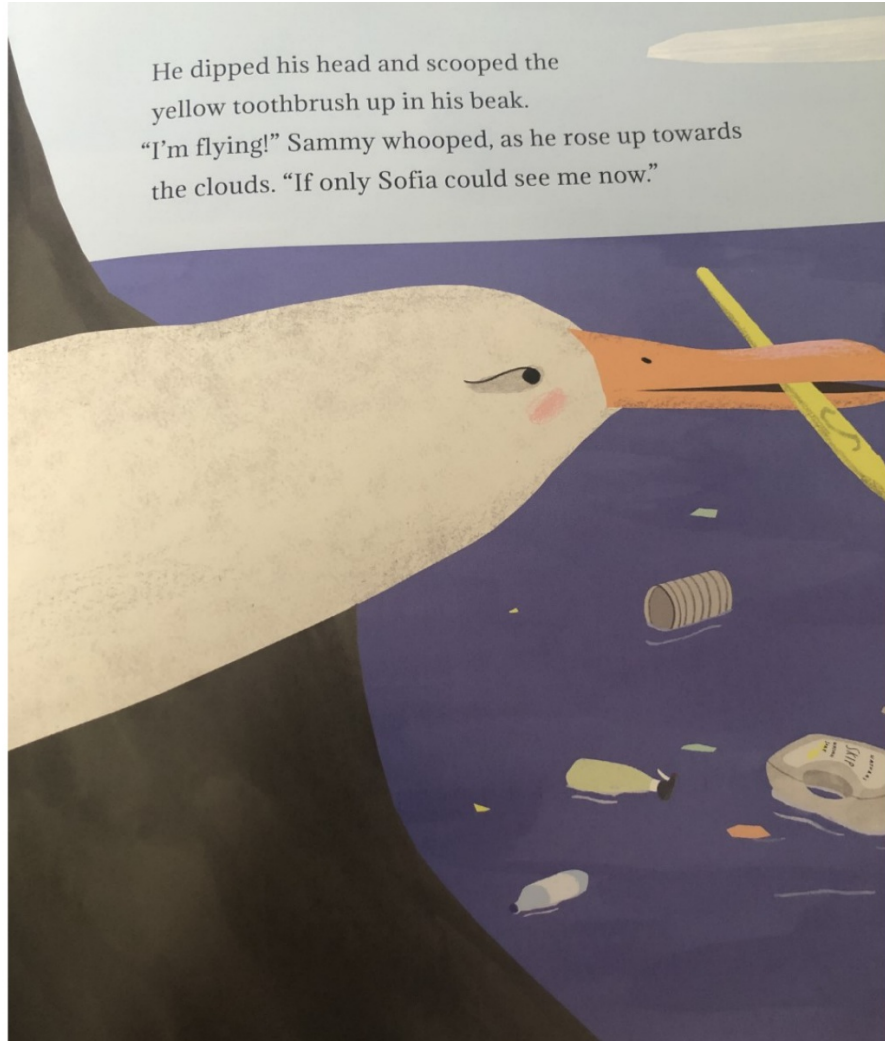

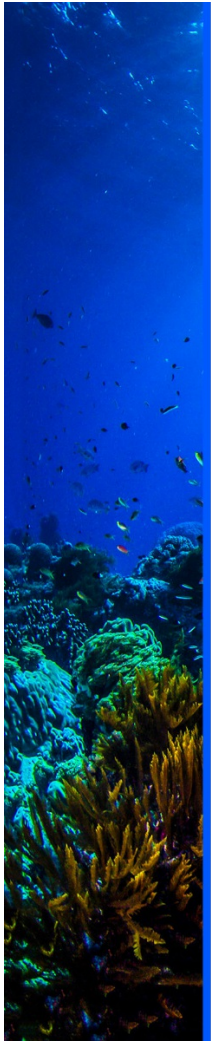

"I'm plastic. I'll make you sick."

"Where is home?" asked the albatross.
"The stars told me to sail north by north east," Sammy replied.
"I bring luck to those who sail the seas."
The albatross blinked.
"I will help you."
