Six-year-old Sofia was allowed to choose her own toothbrush. She picked one as yellow as sunshine and drew an S on its tummy.

“Now everyone knows this is my toothbrush,” she said.
“His name is Sammy.”

“That’s not Sammy,” cried Sofia, when she saw a red toothbrush beside the sink. “Where is he?”

But the dustmen had emptied the bins and taken Sammy away.

The blast of a ship's horn startled Sammy.
"What's happening?" he squeaked.
"We're on a boat," said a crushed soap box.
"You mean, I'm a sailor?" Sammy smiled. "Wait till I tell Sofia."

An illustration of a yellow, stick-like character named Sammy with a spiky white head and a large letter 'S' on its body. Next to it is a brown cardboard box with a face and the words 'SOA' and 'CREAM BAR' written on it.An illustration of a cargo ship with a black hull, white superstructure, and a red stripe. It is carrying several stacks of red and blue shipping containers. A plume of grey smoke rises from the ship's funnel. The ship is sailing on a grey sea under a light sky with a few birds.

Sammy sailed across the sea for countless days and nights.

Then there was a grinding sound and a clang, followed by a dazzling light.

“Thank you, friend rat,”
Sammy called, as he floated away.

The sun rose and the sun set a hundred times,
as Sammy sailed the seas.
He washed up on a golden beach and saw a pink toothbrush dancing with a plastic bottle under a palm tree.
“Where am I?” he asked them.
“The Island of Love,” replied the pink toothbrush.
“Our love will last as long as we do,” said the plastic bottle, embracing the toothbrush.
“For ever.”
